Role of Economics in Conflict Negotiation

Scope

Central and Eastern Europe

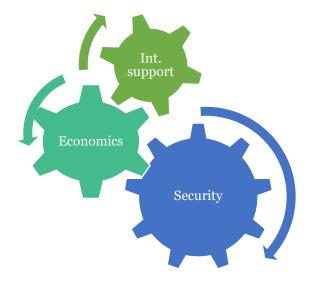

Kosovo (priority), Transnistria, Eastern Ukraine, Abkhazia, South Ossetia, Nagorno Karabakh

Solution

Change negotiation dynamics by presenting a clear vision on benefits of peace

- Identify future economic projects¹/policies that 'grow the pie' and are made possible by peace
- Pie needs be grown based on catering to entrenched interests and relevant stakeholders
- Use clear and robust economic analysis² that is understandable to policy makers, stakeholders and broader public on the benefits from identified projects
- Create a clear vision on benefits of peace supported by robust economic analysis

Dynamics improve when using all leverage points

Problem definition

Zero-sum game and deadlock

- There is an absence of robust economic analysis on benefits of peace in international conflict negotiations
- When negotiations address economic issues, focus is on gaining control of existing assets
- Focus on security issues and existing assets causes 'slicing the pie' negotiation dynamics
- This results in parties playing a zerosum game and leads to deadlock

Use all leverage points

Security

• Security issues often sit higher on the priority ladder in negotiations. Nevertheless, clearly presenting the economic benefits of peace can favorably impact negotiation dynamics

Economics

• Forward looking strategic economic analysis can serve as an important leverage point but unfortunately it is largely absent from negotiations

International support

 Clearly identifying how international support can address security concerns and cultivate economic benefits of peace can be another positive leverage point

contact@veritasglobal.ch

www.veritasglobal.ch

¹ Identify projects of macroeconomic significance such as A Georgian-Russian Pipeline. This particular idea may have been taken over by events, due to 2008 war and development of other infrastructure for oil and gas.

² Examples of clear economic analysis: Impact of US ban on PEDs or Impact of Bali TFA